Simon Plant Want to turn your kitchen into a functional, pleasant and modern space? Bespoke kitchen design company Papilio transform spaces by designing and manufacturing personalized kitchen systems. Papilio's creative director Stephen Garland and managing director Matt Prall talk to House Beautiful about what it takes to create the perfect kitchen. As Matt says, The places we choose to live, work or relax shape us as we shape them. We believe in transforming these spaces into inspiring spaces that are functional and pleasant. The ambient lighting creates a mood in a kitchen, something with which we enjoy playing a lot in Papilio. This creates the atmosphere when changing from a functional kitchen to a fun space and helps to highlight the details. Finally, we like our kitchens to have as much natural light as possible in them. It is one of the reasons we like to deal with renovation projects in the early stages, as we can work with the architect to provide information about kitchen design and natural light within the space. 2 Storage The majority of customers talk about location storage as a basic requirement and we fully agree with this, however, the key to providing adequate storage is often down to the organization. We consider the layout so that all the required kitchen utensils are conveniently located - oven pans next to the oven, knives from the preparation area, mugs near the kettle etc. The beauty of a fully bespoke kitchen is that everything can be considered and made convenient. 3 Layout The way you work in your kitchen is personal for every person and every family. Surely there are some typical requirements, an example is the golden triangle; the connection between the fireplace, sink and refrigerator, all of which must be relatively close to each other and easily accessible. With a bespoke kitchen we are able to look at how and when children use the kitchen, and how the space functions at dinners or romantic dinners. Streaming and access to other rooms is an important element of the layout too. Currently, the trend is largely towards open kitchen diners design, but often the utility room is a separate space that needs to be easily accessed. We also see a tilt towards the outdoors in your kitchen area. 4 Aesthetics This is the area that most of our customers are most interested in, so it is our job to ensure that we choose the most attractive and practical materials in any case. A custom-made kitchen has an unlimited combination of options until the finishes go. The perfect kitchen will different appearance depending on each individual taste.' 5 Social area This content is created and maintained by third parties and is inserted into this page to help users provide their email addresses. Unless you're cool with treating the hardest working room in your home like a museum exhibit, resist the temptation to buy cheaper or brighter materials available and go for durable options that can stand up to normal abuse. Trust us: While it can be hard to leave that raised, tempered top glass bar (ooh!) in the showroom, repairing the first (and second, and third) chips will get old. Very quickly. Choosing the right materials is easy if you are doing your homework. There are amazing products out there, says Jeffrey Holloway, a certified kitchen designer and owner of holloway home improvement center in Marmora, N.J. You're looking at price point, hygiene, how easy it is to clean the product, its duration and maintenance. Buy & Sell Here's how to price your home to sell fast. Funding is a confusing time, but lenders are putting remedies, such as tolerance, in place to help homeowners. Cleaning & Decluttering A bleach solution or rubbing alcohol is your best bet to keep your home sterile. #1 plastic laminate counters first off, there's plenty of great laminate out there. It's the entry-level, plastic plastic sheet to stay away from, Holloway says. These are the ones that look thin and dull, as opposed to rich texture. Scratch easily, and if the product under the plastic sheet gets wet (say, by steam grow from your dishwasher), can delaminate countertop, which means the edges will chip quite easily. Kitchen The timeless beauty of versatile shades. Kitchen duration is key to kitchen remodeling, but it's not according to cost much. Kitchen cabinets are reacting kitchens might be superficial, but the results and savings are dramatic. Kitchen These 7 ideas will make your kitchen timeless gorgeous and functional. Kitchen Follow these seven strategies to get the most economical profit in your kitchen remodels. Remodeling, a wrong hot pan in plastic will lead to a melted disaster zone that you will remember forever. But if you're watching your budget, plastic laminate to the next level up is a good choice. It has good color consistency, and there are many retro and modern designs available, says Dani Polidor, an interior designer and owner of the artistry suite, and a REALTOR® in Pittsford, New Republic. The new laminate counter technology offers scratch resistance, textured surfaces, and designs that mimic real wood and stone. There are even self-repairing nano-technologies embedded in some sheets of plastic, says Polidor, and others have antimicrobial properties. For an average 10-by-20-foot kitchen, the next flat-up laminate will cost about $3,000, Polidor estimates, and those super cool tech options add another $200 to $300. For the duration and longer life, the investment is worth it. #2 inexpensive vinyl sheet flooring you spend all day walking on your floor, so quality really has themes. At the lowest price point, about $2.50 per square foot, cheaper vinyl sheet floors tend to be thin. If your vinyl floor is glued down and the underlayment gets delaminated, say, from the water dripping from your dishwasher or refrigerator, you'll get bubbles on your floor, Holloway warns. Compare this to luxury vinyl tile (LVT) which costs about $5 per square foot. It's still usually glued down, but it's a little more forgiving than its less aristocratic cousin - and can come in tiles, which you can liquidate in order to mimic the look of higher-end stone, Polidor says. #3 Some laminated Holloway office fronts suggest staying away from lower end thermofoil office fronts. What's a greenhouse? Unlike its name, there is no aluminum foil or metal-type material in it. It's really vinyl, which is heated and molded around fiberboard. If the office is white and the price is waaaaay affordable compared to other cabinets, think twice. Cheaper thermofol has three critical issues: 1. It is not heat resistant. If it is located near a dishwasher or oven, it could mislead. 2. It can warp and yellow with age, revealing its cheapness. 3. The wood under the thermostat is also of poor quality and will not hold up over time. But just like with plastic laminate, science has taken great strides, and now there are a number of new cabinets reshaping thermofoil reputation. New European plastic sheets have become all the rage for clean lining, flat appearance, Polidor says. It is friendly to the and may look like wood or high gloss. It's not your grandmother's heater. And it doesn't even come at Grandma's prices. But still, the new thermofoil is much more affordable than custom cabinets, and still satisfies with its rich look and duration. #4 high-gloss lacquer cabinets are nice glow can be impressive. And Spend. About 20 layers of lacquer go to a desk for the high-gloss look. Ding it or scratch it, and it's costly to repair. It is a multi-step process to repair them, Polidor Polidor A better option for the same look is high-end greenhouse (see; we said there were good greenhouse options!). Thermofoil has a finish that is melted in the cabinet and baked for a more durable exterior. And it's much more budget-friendly, too. High-gloss can be in thousands of dollars, while thermofoil can be in hundreds or dollars. #5 flat paint flat color has this refined, velvety, rich look that we all love. But keep it in the bedroom. It is not KF (kitchen-friendly). The flat color, also known as matte color, has duration issues. He's unstable. Try to erase a splash of chili sauce, and you ruined the paint job. About the only place to use flat paint in your kitchen is on the ceiling (unless, of course, you have a reputation for blender or pressure cooker accidents that reach the ceiling, then recommend takeout). Instead, you want to use high-gloss or semi-glossy paint on your walls. They can stand up to multiple rubbing before splitting. Related: Avoid a do-over when painting your kitchen. Choose the right color #6 modern backsplash material flavors change. So avoid super fashionable colors and materials when it comes to permanently sticking something to your kitchen walls. Backsplashes come in glass, metal, iridescent, and high-relief décor tiles, which are undeniably fun and tempting. They can also be expensive, ranging from $5 to $220 a square foot, and difficult to install. And after all this work and expenses, if (er . . . when) your tastes change in a few years, it will be very difficult to justify a repeat. Stick with a classic subway tile at $2 to $3 square feet. Or, even more budget-friendly, choose a built-in backsplash that matches your countertop hardware. If you want pops of color, do it with accessories, Polidor suggests.
